Rocklin Police to honor first officer killed in line of duty

In the history of Rocklin, only two officers have been killed in the line of duty: City Marshall Sam Renaldi, who died in 1914 and Officer Matt Redding, who was killed in 2005. "Honoring our fallen heroes is important for the culture of the Rocklin Police Department," explained Police Chief Ron Lawrence. "Most people in our community remember of its first fallen officer. City Marshal Sam Renaldi was shot by saloonkeeper Ulysses Holmes while trying to enforce a curfew violation on Feb. 18, 1914. Earlier in the day, Holmes had apparently gotten into an argument with a female employee at his saloon on Railroad Avenue. Renaldi and his deputy confronted Holmes at the livery stable at However, Lawrence continued, Rocklin has neglected the memory tinued, "memories tend to fade and people forget. As many have forgotten Marshall Renaldi 100 years after his death, many may also forget Officer Redding 100 years from

We look forward to an exciting future partnering with Rocklin's Police and Fire Departments helping to honor the history of both institutions and their contributions to our community. We also see challenges ahead as the city redevelops the Big Gun property. The legacy of Rocklin's granite past must be preserved in a way that teaches future generations the history of an industry that helped build California.

about Old Town Rocklin

Gene Johnson

The city has leased Union Pacific

Property from Rocklin Road to Midas Avenue. City Manager Horst plans beautification for the area, including a walking trail. The city installed a fence to separate the area from the rails and terminated it with cinder block. Native granite would be more appropriate. The tops of a number of 19th century engine service pits have been unearthed fanning out from the turntable area, an awesome site. The city covered or removed some of the original round house foundation and a new cinder block wall covers a portion of the first pit. I cannot help thinking that the city's good efforts could have been better if the historical society had participated in the planning.

A Subway shop and a 7-11 have opened at the corner of Sunset and Pacific Streets. Wal-Mart Neighborhood Grocery opened on Pacific Street. Dutch Brothers coffee drive thru is nearing completion at Sunset and Springview.

Auvergne (eggplant) Café opened at the old Icing on the Cupcake location on Pacific Street. We can recommend both the roast turkey and eggplant sandwiches on sliced sour dough, with the bargain $1 dessert bar option.

The Barudoni Building gate showroom, art display and wine tasting venue on Front Street is progressing as evidenced by the application, pasted to the window, to serve alcoholic beverages.

Major construction of 2 roundabouts (Rocklin Road and Meyers and Rocklin Road and Grove (Finn Hall)) is clearly underway. The adjacent area will be a 72-unit apartment complex complete with a sound wall. According to the developer there will be a 10-foot landscape easement and a "very decorative sound wall with pilasters, rock and things like that". This is not a very definitive description, but apparently it is adequate for planning commission signoff. If we must have a sound wall to welcome people to our city, I hope the community can be involved in its design. This is an opportunity for exceptional public art.

The Old Town Tree Lighting continues as a very special Rocklin event. The date for the all-free 2013 event is Sat Dec 7th; 4 to 7 pm. The historical society, City of Rocklin, Rotary and Kiwanis co-sponsor the event along with major contributors including local businesses and churches. Kids love it; come early for the 4 pm parade; enjoy the rides, cookies and chocolate. Then check in for a photo with Santa. The historical society brokered the donation of a load of redwood ship lap building siding, through the Rocklin Lions club, to the Camp Ross Relles Scout Camp near Nevada City. Historical society member Marshall Smith initiated the effort after a visit with Bud Taglio, the siding's owner. Taglio lives on a small ranch in the undeveloped part of Clover Valley.

The city's plan for disposition of the Big Gun Quarry site was at issue at a city council meeting on September 10. The plan would commit the shed area and associated artifacts to be sold as commercial property. The quarry hole would be transferred to the city for government use. Representing the historical society, I requested that the council change the proposal in a way that would preserve the shed and artifacts for governmental use. The city's plan clearly did not recognize the historic importance of the site as affirmed by its listing on the National Register of Historic Places. The council's denied our request by voting to adopt the plan unchanged..

Historical society President De-Foe, Roy Ruhkala and I addressed the Rocklin Redevelopment Agency Oversight Board meeting on September 27, emphasizing that the Big Gun shed and associated artifacts should be saved for government use and that the artifacts should remain on their historic site. I noted that the city is free to propose a management plan that is best for the community, recognizes our heritage and recognizes that the site is on the National Register of Historic Places. We proposed that the city's Big Gun Property Management Plan be rejected on the basis that the city acquired the site in 2010 without recognizing the value of the site relative to Rocklin's heritage. We followed with the recommendation that the council meet with the historical society to determine if a plan to save the site could be proposed to the state. The oversight board denied our request. The management plan is approved for submission to the state Dept of Finance. We can appeal to the state Department of Finance. Letters from the community can help. See Carol Ellis' article on Page 8.

MAKE HISTORY AT OLD ST. MARY'S CHAPEL

Nancy Lohse

Perched proudly on the corner of Rocklin Road and Front Street is beautiful Old St. Mary's Chapel. Built in 1883 and dedicated as a Catholic church on August 13, 1882, Old St. Mary's is celebrating her 130th birthday this year. Take time to drive by, stop and walk the lovely grounds, and sing Happy Birthday to Rocklin's oldest public building! Saved from demolition in 2005 and lovingly restored, the building continues to make history as brides and grooms walk down the aisle as husband and wife and stop afterward to ring the bell three times celebrating their wedding!

Each wedding at OSM is unique. A recent wedding was held outside on the patio even though I offered the cool interior of the chapel. The couple their first date at a music event on the patio and he took her back there for a surprise proposal. They were determined to complete the story with a wedding on the patio. I did open the front doors so they could continue the tradition of ringing the bell.

Please take time to 'like' us on Face Book so that you can be notified of fun public events happening at Old St. Mary's Chapel.

In Memory of Dorothy Elizabeth Labudde Born Apr. 2, 1924 in Oshkosh, WI. Died July 31, 2013 in Oakland, CA.

Dorothy graduated from the Univ. of Wisconsin and began her career as an English teacher, married Donald Labudde and moved to San Francisco. After retiring as a speech pathologist she was one of the first residents of Stanford Ranch and became a volunteer at the library and Chamber of Commerce and later was a museum docent as well as "Grandma" in the mock wedding video for the Chapel. A founding member of RHS getting the 501 non profit status, Dorothy served as Secretary, Treasurer and President. She received the Citizen of the Year and Pioneer Ruhkala awards. Dorothy loved to read and loved Rocklin.

She died following a long illness and will be missed by her nieces, nephews and friends.

WE NEED YOU

Robert Mart

While financial donations are always welcome, we need help from those of you who have a knack for fixer projects, yes, you do-it-yourself types. We're hoping many volunteers will sign up and pitch in to help with some little jobs around the Rocklin History Museum and the Old Saint Mary's Chapel. We need you only for a few hours each month. Maybe you haven't been asked to help. Well, we're asking now! Remember that in the past a few have done the work to benefit the many.

Fixer Days started on Tuesday, October 1, and will continue this year on the first and third Tuesdays of each month, and maybesome Saturdays.

Make no mistake, we need your help. There is an urgency to our request, as many of the little jobs are long overdue! No worries if you can't help, volunteer your neighbor. We're recruiting help from the ladies as well. Please pass the word along.

Please reply to me at 916-435-9360 or e-mail

And thank you to all of you who have already volunteered.

a 20-minute tour of Rocklin's granite history an encore article from the Quarry Quarterly of January 15, 2007

Gary Day

Note: This article is unchanged from its original publication in 2007.

The Rocklin History Museum is open from 1 pm until 4 pm on Wednesday, Saturday and Sunday afternoons. If you are in the mood for Rocklin's history at other times, try this 20 minute tour of two sites which were important to Rocklin's role as the Sacramento Valley's major producer of granite products in the late 19th and early 20th centuries. Downtown Rocklin is astride high quality and easily accessible granite in a 100+ square mile eroded granite belt that extends from Folsom to Lincoln. The Rocklin area's landscape includes 61 abandoned quarries. Many of these were opened in the 19th century to provide culvert stone and riprap for railroad construction and building blocks for California's monumental buildings such as the State Capitol Building in Sacramento.

Start your tour by driving to the parking lot at the northwest corner of Rocklin Road and Granite Drive. The lake that you see there fills a quarry operated in the early 20th century by the Union Granite Company under the management of Finnish immigrant Matt Ruhkala. Business at Rocklin's granite operations flourished in the 1890s and very early 20th century, but competition from cement-based concrete attenuated the industry's growth after 1905. Nevertheless the Ruhkala quarry continued to produce granite curbing and stone for monuments until at least 1915. Later, Ruhkala operated two other quarries, one of which is now under the westbound lanes of Highway 80.

Next, look from the Ruhkala quarry to the south side of Rocklin Road. Ira Delano's Rocklin Granite Company quarry was located there. Delano's quarry was Rocklin's largest and most financially successful 19th century quarry. Delano was possibly Rocklin's wealthiest citizen. It was mostly his money that built Rocklin's racetrack in the mid 1890s. In 1915 quarrymen struck the Rocklin quarries for a raise from $3.25 to $3.75 per day and closed most of Rocklin's quarries permanently. Delano gave up his business and retired a year later.

Delano's quarry pit served as Rocklin's garbage dump during the mid Matt Ruhkala's Union Granite Company Quarry now holds the lake that decorates an office building at Rocklin Road and Granite Drive. This quarry produced curbstone and monument stone in the very early 20th century.

20th century and that dump now underpins the parking lot and motel in back of the Taco Bell.

Next, go to the east side of the Rocklin City Office Building at 3970 Rocklin Road and climb to the second floor landing of the exterior stairwell. The stairwell is to the left of the building's entrance. Look south and you will see the sheer granite walls of the Big Gun quarry pit, a spectacular site.

The California Granite company, under the leadership of Finnish immigrant Adolf Pernu, acquired this quarry in the 1890's and modernized its operations with pneumatic, steam and electric equipment in the early 20th century. Quarrying operations here survived the granite industry's early 20th century downturn, but financial problems set in after Pernu died in a Yosemite quarry accident in 1929. Four of Ruhkala's sons acquired the quarry in 1933 (Ruhkala had eleven children). They gave it the Ruhkala family's Union Granite Company name, repaired the aging equipment, and produced monument stone, monuments, and crushed stone products here until 1978.

In 1968 Congressman "Bizz" Johnson commended three of the Ruhkala brothers, Ben, Ruben and Abner, for producing 32 granite benches for the United States Capital grounds in Washington D.C. In the early 1970s the Ruhkalas imported quartz and crushed it to reinforce the concrete walls of the Transamerica building in San Francisco.

Recent owners gave the quarry the Big Gun name in the early 1990s but they did not extract significant amounts of stone. For countertops and monuments the light grey color of Rocklin's granite cannot compete with the more colorful shades of granite available from elsewhere in California and from overseas. Granite processing operations ceased here in 2005. Today, in 2006, the latest owner has optioned the quarry to a downtown Rocklin redevelopment company that is proposing to the city to preserve it as the centerpiece of a commercial venture.

Most of the information in this article is from State Geologic Survey records and from Ruben and Roy Ruhkala

Keeping Up With Joel Parker Whitney

A Study of His Personal Diaries and Writings

Whitney was the largest landowner in northern California, with more than 20,000 acres. He was instrumental in the development of this region in the period 1855-1913.

Bill Marble

One of the multitude of businesses that occupied the life of J. Parker Whitney was growing citrus fruit, and in particular, oranges. On April 16, 1906, J. Parker, his wife Lucy, turned to the Starr King Office Building that he owned on Geary St. in downtown San Francisco. As it turned out, the building survived the earthquake, but that night it became fully consumed by a fire that began in a theater on the next block and was totally destroyed. The Starr King Building had been a five-story structure that Whitney had upgraded to seven stories in 1902. In all, Whitney had $545,000 invested in the building and as a result of the fire would lose additional thousands of dollars in office rental fees. He feared that the insurance companies would all go bankrupt and he would suffer a total loss. Fortunately, that did not occur. He managed to recoup $400,000 from his insurance claim and immediately planned to build a new, improved, fireproof Whitney Building. His initial optimism led him to speculate that the new steel-framed, concrete building would be up and operational in ten months. It took much longer and the building did not become occupied until 1909.

The fact that he began work on his new building immediately was an inspiration to the San Francisco community and displayed his optimism that the city would rebound from the tragic events of April 18 and rapidly be even better than before. The new building was eight stories high and constructed of fireproof materials only. It contained four large elevators and had its own electric power equipment in the basement that would provide not only the power for its own needs, but would also provide electricity to other customers in San Francisco. There was to be a large department store on the first floor and the upper floors would house 300 well-lighted offices for rent. All walls and flooring were covered with ornamental marble.

The Whitney Building

J. Parker Whitney was justifiably proud of the role he played in getting San Francisco back on its feet and making the new city even better than the old.

Next time: Who the heck is Tom Eastland?

and son Vincent were in Porterville, CA to check out some orange growing property for possible purchase. Porterville is in central California about 75 miles southeast of Fresno. J. Parker and Vincent spent an enjoyable couple of days inspecting prospective tracts in a brand new Pope Toledo Touring car. They found one tract of 640 acres priced at $19,000 that looked interesting to them.

However, priorities shifted quite quickly and unexpectedly when, on April 18 at 5:15 AM J. Parker and Lucy were unexpectedly awakened by a "moderate trembling of the Earth." Little did they know that almost 260 miles away, San Francisco was enduring a major earthquake and fire which would become a tragic milestone in the history of the beautiful city.

As soon as J. Parker learned of the severity of the event his sole focus

Rocklin's famous hobo Gary Day

Finnish immigrant Oskari Tokoi arrived, hobo-style, in Rocklin in 1896 and avoided detection by hiding in a hayloft. He found work in a granite quarry and later opened a quarry of his own. He married Rocklin's prettiest girl and returned with her to Finland to enter politics. He became the first premier of a free Finland when the Bolsheviks granted Finland its independence as they came to power in Russia in 1917.

now if it were not for our honoring their commitment to our community. By memorializing City Marshal Sam Renaldi, we ensure his memory will live on in minds of future generations."

Plans to pay tribute to Renaldi include a special remembrance and wreath-laying ceremony at Renaldi's gravesite in the Rocklin Cemetery on the 100th anniversary of his death - Feb. 19, 2014. Members of the Rocklin Historical Society have been invited to dress in period costumes for the ceremony, which will be open to the public. Following the ceremony, a memorial to Rocklin's two fallen heroes will be unveiled. The unique granite water feature, which will be inscribed with the names of the two officers, will be placed in front of the Rocklin Police headquarters. The day will conclude with the Rocklin Police Department's annual awards dinner for officers, staff and volunteers.

Throughout 2014, Rocklin Police personnel will have the option to purchase and wear a special law enforcement badge commemorating Renaldi. The five-pointed sta rshaped badge was designed to replicate the City Marshal's badge. "Marking 100 years of City Marshal Sam Renaldi's death is important as well as a significant milestone," Lawrence concluded. "Failing to honor his memory would be diminishing the sacrifice he made to the citizens of Rocklin. As a police chief, I will not allow that to happen. I find it one of my duties and responsibilities to honor our past just as much as it is to guide the future of the Rocklin Police Department."

Garden Report

Sally Huseby

I am so glad to be enjoying the beginning of fall with cooler weather. Even though we were supposed to be 'off' for the summer, there were some chores we still had to accomplish.

In July we worked at the museum weeding and pruning in preparation for the Heritage Trail Days in August. Near the end of July our great team of volunteers spread bark throughout the flowerbeds for weed abatement as well as making the museum more attractive for our visitors in August. At the beginning of September we were back at the chapel, weeding and pruning vines and trees to keep the flowerbeds looking great for our many upcoming weddings. Some replacement flowers were planted in bridal garden along with the evernecessary snail bait. My thanks to all who have worked so hard to keep our gardens looking so beautiful.
